Wall St futures edge higher in countdown to Fed decision

U.S. stock index futures attempted a recovery on Wednesday following a two-day slide, as lower oil prices offered some relief during a tense wait for the Federal Reserve's interest rate decision. The rate move, scheduled to be announced at 2 p.m., will be crucial to investor sentiment at a time when elevated Treasury yields, inflation and the escalating Middle East conflict have kept risk appetite in check.

Dollar consolidates ahead of Fed rate decision and Warsh signals

The Dollar Index, which tracks the greenback against a basket of six major currencies, was virtually flat around 99.59, pausing after a multi-day rally that has seen investors aggressively price in a resumption of monetary tightening in Washington. Across major European bourses, the euro was also flat on the day, hovering close to its lowest levels in nearly one month at $1.1500.

EUR/USD Break Below 1.1533 Could Deepen the Euro's Technical Slide

The euro has declined in every session since the European Central Bank raised rates last Thursday, and on Monday it closed near 1.1550, down 0.42%, beneath both its 50-day and 200-day exponential moving averages for the first time since late July. The pair touched a one-month low on Monday and is trading just above that level in the run-up to Wednesday's Federal Reserve decision.
